

Age As We Live (Chinese Edition)

Age As We Live is the classic essay collection of Feng Tang, famous Chinese author. Feng Tang believes his poems are better than his novels, and his novels are better than his essays. However, except his novel No Other, his essays have better sales than his novels, and his novels have better sales than his poems. It is understandable. People are troubled by the busy work and high housing price, they are unwilling to see flowers, see and moon. They are unwilling to read heart, spirit and poems. Except some extreme cases, who will spend entire weekends to read a novel? This book is the best essay collection of Feng Tang, which tells about interesting books, interesting people, interesting things and interesting places. This book also includes 22 latest works, such as Six Tips for Aging Artistic Single Ladies, 21 Sighs in Reading Qi Baishi, Prequel of Sanlitun, You Can Never Always Pee That High, 24 Histories of A Man and etc.
